GAME 4 RECAP

The Wolves once again stymied the Thunderbirds attack and special teams, topping Springfield by a 4-2 score. Chicago did itself few favors in giving the T-Birds nine different power play opportunities, but Springfield could only capitalize on one of those, a late second period goal from Klim Kostin that went down as the T-Birds' first goal in the series since the second period of Game 2.

For a fourth straight game in the series, Chicago tallied first, with Jack Drury beating Hofer from close range on a knuckling shot with less than three minutes to go in the first. Richard Panik, who was stopped on a penalty shot with the game still scoreless, added another power-play goal to give Chicago a 2-0 lead with just 12:1 left on the first period clock. Panik has now scored in each of his last nine Calder Cup Finals games dating back to 2013.

At the other end, Pyotr Kochetkov, starting his third straight game for the first time all year, continued his stellar run, stopping 39 of 41 shots to pick up another victory. Andrew Poturalski and Josh Leivo also scored for the Wolves, while James Neal added a tally for Springfield in the late stages.

IT'S NOT OVER YET

In the history of the Calder Cup Finals, only three teams have ever erased a three games to one series deficit, but it is not unprecedented. However, it has not occurred since the Providence Reds completed the feat in 1949. The Wolves also did need three cracks at winning the Western Conference Finals - Chicago won the first three games before Stockton rallied back to win the next two before the Wolves completed the series in the sixth game. Springfield successfully fended off its one elimination game in these playoffs, defeating Laval 4-0 in Game 7 of the Eastern Conference Finals.

CUP IN THE BUILDING

The Calder Cup will be in the building on Saturday night as the Wolves can look to lock down their first Calder Cup championship since 2008. Chicago reached the Finals the last time the Cup was contested in 2019, winning Game 1 over the Charlotte Checkers before losing the next four contests. Ironically, that Checkers championship team featured Wolves head coach Ryan Warsofsky as an assistant, and at the time, the Checkers were affiliated with the Carolina Hurricanes, who of course are now Chicago's NHL affiliate.

Calder Cup Finals Recap:

Game 1: T-Birds 5, Wolves 4 (OT)
